OIL SANDS

SEVERITY
AFFECTED	n_ =
MDG EFFECT	Ĵ♀╈₽₽₩

Oil sands, or tar sands, are an unconventional source of petroleum extracted from an asphalt bitumen sand-like substance

With the projected expansion of oil demand over the next twenty years, unconventional fuels, like synthetic crude from oil sands, will make up a significant proportion of the new supply

Oil sands involve large scale localized ecological damage that is costly to remedy: some environmental damage is thought irreversible

Oil sand exploitation is highly concentrated with over 90% of all today's production in Canada, although a small number of mainly developing countries also have important reserves

HOTSPOTS $ 2030 2010 CANADA 0 NIGERIA 1,500 MADAGASCAR 750 85 INDONESIA 600 50 RUSSIA 350

S Economic Cost (2010 PPP non-discounted) Poveloping Country Low Emitters Developed Poveloping Country High Emitters Other Industrialized

$ = Losses per 10,000 USD of GDP

(O) (S) = Millions of USD (2010 PPP non-discounted)

o-called "unconventional fuels", including oil sand-derived synthetic crude as well as shale oil and gas, make up an increasing share of the global energy mix and are poised to contribute significantly to meeting the surging global demand for fossil fuels expected in the two decades ahead (US EIA, 2011). Unconventional fuels are more costly to extract than ordinary crude oil or natural gas because they involve separating out the hydrocarbon fuels from rocks, sand and other debris. The extraction process is water, energy and emission intensive, and generates large volumes of environmental debris and toxic sludge waste (Severson-Baker and Reynolds, 2005; Tenenbaum, 2009; Giesev et al., 2010). Over 600km2 of land in Canada has now been disturbed by oil sand exploitation with 600 million tons of toxic waste by-products from this process now held in over 100km2 of "slurry" ponds (Reuter et al., 2010). The potential growth in environmental risks is significant: proven recoverable reserves are 300 times today's annual production and bitumen deposits that could become recoverable, given technological advances, lie beneath some 140,000 km2 of land, an area almost the size of Bangladesh (GoA, 2012). The Canadian government aims to make Canada an "Energy Superpower" on the back of its oil sand production. Prime Minister, Stephen Harper, has likened this aspiration to "the building of the pyramids or China's Great Wall. Only bigger" (Canada OPM, 2006). Oil sands are expected to more than double in production scale over the next 20 years, with a handful of countries outside Canada also having important deposits of the resource (CAPP, 2011; World Energy Council, 2010).

HAZARD MECHANISM

There are two main types of oil sands exploitation: open pit mining, which involves digging and excavation of bitumen sands containing oil. and various forms of pumping, termed "in situ" extraction. Both processes involve large quantities of water and often solvents to aid the extraction by increasing the fluidity of otherwise highly dense and viscous bitumen sands (Canada NEB, 1996). In order to access the sands via mining, as much as 75 metres of ground soil including all vegetation, usually boreal forests, is removed. On average some two tons of land is removed per barrel of oil extracted (Reuter et al., 2010). Pumping out bitumen oil in situ involves injecting steam and industrial solvents into the ground before pumping out liquefied bitumen (OSDG, 2009).

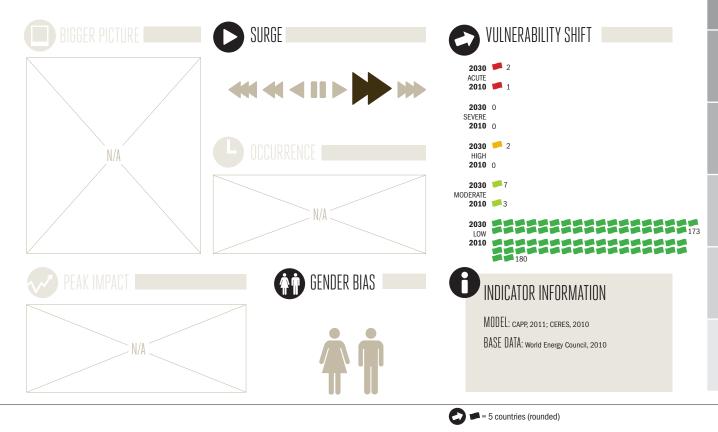

Each barrel of oil produced generates eight barrels of waste slurry (so-called "fine tailings") with current production at around 1.5 million barrels of oil a day (Reuter et al., 2010; CAPP, 2011). The refuse slurry generated by extraction is highly acidic and acutely toxic to aquatic life (Allen, 2008). Numerous different types of pollutants from these processes, including cadmium, copper, lead and mercury, have been released into adjacent waterways, exceeding in many cases local concentration guidelines for fresh water in nearby populated areas (Kelly et al., 2010). To date there has only been minimal reclamation of land to remedy the degradation caused. Experts have estimated that around two thirds of all peatlands damaged by oil sand exploitation would be permanently impaired and irrecoverable (GoA, 2012; Rooney et al., 2012).

If action is not taken to treat open waste ponds, through steps such as "bioremediation", which accelerates natural processes to reduce their toxicity, the environmental damage in terms of human health, water, ecosystems and otherwise, is very likely to exceed any treatment costs (Reuter et al., 2010).

IMPACTS

The environmental impact of oil sands is estimated at over seven billion dollars a year today. As oil sand production is expected to expand, including into other countries, the total environmental costs are set to grow to nearly 25 billion dollars a year in 2030, assuming that much of the world's known reserves have been brought into production (World Energy Council, 2010). Current and prospective oil sand reserves outside Canada include those found in Angola, China, Congo, Indonesia, Italy, Madagascar, Nigeria, Russia, Trinidad and Tobago and the US. Indonesia, Russia and the US have already commenced small-scale levels of production.

Canada is, and will continue to be, worst affected by the environmental impact of oil sands. By 2030, however, Madagascar, Congo and Nigeria are also expected to suffer significant costs linked to the exploitation of this resource, provided exploitation is carried out. The costs for Canada would grow from seven to 20 billion dollars a year by 2030.

THE INDICATOR

The indicator measures the environmental costs of oil sands exploitation by the proxy of measuring the costs of accelerated clean-up, through "bioremediation", of toxic wastes generated. It is assumed that remediation costs are less than or equal to the environmental and health damages that would result if no measures were taken to protect the environment. Currently Canadian oil firms are subject to regulations that could be more forceful in ensuring strict environmental protection measures are complied with: to date the vast majority of toxic waste is untreated (Reuter et al., 2010). Only a small group of countries with significant reserves (four with existing production) are taken into account (World Energy Council, 2010). Environmental "bioremediation" costs per barrel of oil are assumed to be equal for all countries concerned, which could prove an estimation limitation. However, there are few precedents against which to assess the costs.

	5
2010	2030	2010

ACUTE Image: style s	COUNTRY	2010	2030	2010	2030
Madagascar 750 2,000 HIGH 2000 HIGH 2000 Congo 150 650 Nigeria 1,500 5,000 MODERATE 4 4 5,000 4 4 5,000 4 4 5,000 4 4 5,000 4 4 5 600 1,250 2,250 1 1,250 2,250 1,250 2,250 1,250 2,250 1,250 2,250 1,000 1,250 2,250 1,000 1,000 1,250 2,250 1,000 1,250 2,250 1,000 1,250 2,250 1,000 1,250 2,250 1,000 1,	ACUTE
HIGH Image: Control of the second secon	Canada	7,250	20,000	150,000	300,000
Congo 150 650 Nigeria 1,500 5,000 MODERATE	Madagascar		750		2,000
Nigeria 1.500 5,000 MODERATE	HIGH
MODERATE Angola 150 600 China 95 200 Indonesia 85 600 1,250 2,250 Italy 20 250 200 1,250 2,250 Russia 50 350 700 1,250 2,250 Inidad and Tobago 30 100 <t< td=""><td>Congo</td><td></td><td>150</td><td></td><td>650</td></t<>	Congo		150		650
Angola 150 600 China 95 200 Indonesia 85 600 1,250 2,250 Italy 20 250 2050 Russia 50 350 700 1,250 Trinidad and Tobago 30 100 100 United States 60 150 1,250 2,250 LOW 20 2,250 2,250 2,250 Logana 60 150 1,250 2,250 Low 150 1,250 2,250 2,250 Low 150 1,250 2,250 2,250 Algania 150 1,250 2,250 2,250 Algeria Autigua and Barbuda - - - Argentia - - - - Australia - - - - Australia - - - - Bahamas - - -	Nigeria		1,500		5,000
China 95 200 Indonesia 85 600 1,250 2,250 Italy 20 250 250 Russia 50 350 700 1,250 Trinidad and Tobago 30 100 100 United States 60 150 1,250 2,250 LOW	MODERATE
Indonesia 85 600 1,250 2,250 Italy 20 250 250 Russia 50 350 700 1,250 Russia 50 350 700 1,250 Trinidad and Tobago 30 100 100 United States 60 150 1,250 2,250 LOW - - - - - Afghanistan -	Angola
taly 20 250 Russia 50 350 700 1.250 Trinidad and Tobago 30 100 United States 60 150 1.250 2.250 LOW Afghanistan Albania Algeria Antigua and Barbuda Argentina Artigua and Barbuda Argentina Australia Australia Australia Australia Bahamas Bahamas Bahamas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas Bahanas	China		95
Russia 50 350 700 1,250 Trinidad and Tobago 30 100 United States 60 150 1,250 2,250 LOW Afghanistan Albania Algeria Algeria Argentina Argentina Argentina Australia Australia Australia Australia Bahamas B	Indonesia	85		1,250	2,250
Trinidad and Tobago 30 100 United States 60 150 1.250 2.250 LOW Afghanistan Albania Albania Algeria Antigua and Barbuda Argentina Arrenia Australia Australia Australia Australia Bahamas Bahrain Bahamas Bahrain Bahgladesh Barbados Belarus Belarus Belgium Belize	Italy		20		250
Bahamas Bahamas Bahamas	Russia	50		700
LOW Afghanistan Albania Algeria Algeria Antigua and Barbuda Argentina Argentina Australia Australia Austria Bahamas Bahrain Bangdedsh Belarus Belarus Belgium Belize	Trinidad and Tobago
Afghanistan Albania Algeria Algeria Antigua and Barbuda Argentina Argentina Australia Australia Azerbaijan Bahamas Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize		60	150	1,250	2,250
Albania Albania Algeria Albania Algeria Antigua and Barbuda Argentina Armenia Axtralia Austria Austria Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahrain Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	LOW
Algeria Antigua and Barbuda Argentina Argentina Australia Australia Austria Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahrain Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Afghanistan
Artigua and Barbuda Argentina Armenia Australia Austria Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahrain Bangladesh Bearbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Albania
Argentina Argentina Argentina Australia Austria Azerbaijan Bahmas Bahmas Bahgadesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Algeria
Armenia Australia Austria Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahrain Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belgium	Antigua and Barbuda
Australia Australia Austria Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahamas Bahamas Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belarus Belarus Belarus	Argentina
Austria Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahrain Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Armenia
Azerbaijan Bahamas Bahrain Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Australia
Bahamas Bahrain Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Austria
Bahrain Bangladesh Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Azerbaijan
Bangladesh Bangladesh Belarus Belgium Belize	Bahamas
Barbados Belarus Belgium Belize	Bahrain
Belarus Belgium Belize	Bangladesh
Belgium Belize	Barbados
Belize	Belarus
	Belgium
Benin	Belize
	Benin

2010 2030 2010 2030 COUNTRY COUNTRY Bhutan Bolivia Bosnia and Herzegovina Botswana Brazil Brunei Bulgaria Burkina Faso Burundi Cambodia Cameroon Cape Verde Central African Republic Chad Chile Colombia Comoros Costa Rica Cote d.lvoire Croatia Cuba Cyprus Czech Republic Denmark Djibouti Dominica Dominican Republic DR Congo Ecuador Egypt El Salvador Equatorial Guinea

($

Eritrea
Estonia
Ethiopia
Fiji
Finland
France
Gabon
Gambia
Georgia
Germany
Ghana
Greece
Grenada
Guatemala
Guinea
Guinea-Bissau
Guyana
Haiti
Honduras
Hungary
Iceland
India
Iran
Iraq
Ireland
Israel
Jamaica
Japan
Jordan
Kazakhstan
Kenya
Kiribati

CARBON VULNERABILITY

2

● Acute ● Severe ● High ● Moderate ● Low

COUNTRY	2010	2030	2010	2030	COUNTRY	2010	2030	2010	2030	COUNTRY	2010	2030	2010	2030
Kuwait					North Korea					Sudan/South Sudan
Kyrgyzstan					Norway					Suriname
Laos					Oman					Swaziland
Latvia					Pakistan					Sweden
Lebanon					Palau
Lesotho					Panama					Switzerland
Liberia					Papua New Guinea					Syria
Libya					Paraguay					Tajikistan
Lithuania					Peru					Tanzania
Luxembourg					Philippines					Thailand
Macedonia					Poland					Timor-Leste
Malawi					Portugal					Тодо
Malaysia					Qatar					Tonga
Maldives					Romania
Mali					Rwanda					Tunisia
Malta					Saint Lucia					Turkey
Marshall Islands					Saint Vincent					Turkmenistan
Mauritania					Samoa					Tuvalu
Mauritius					Sao Tome and Principe					Uganda
Mexico					Saudi Arabia					Ukraine
Micronesia					Senegal					United Arab Emirates
Moldova					Seychelles
Mongolia					Sierra Leone					United Kingdom
Morocco					Singapore					Uruguay
Mozambique					Slovakia					Uzbekistan
Myanmar					Slovenia					Vanuatu
Namibia					Solomon Islands					Venezuela
Nepal					Somalia					Vietnam
Netherlands					South Africa					Yemen
New Zealand					South Korea
Nicaragua					Spain					Zambia
Niger					Sri Lanka					Zimbabwe				